MDF FACTS

DOES MDF CONTAIN NASTY GLUES?

The process of MDF manufacturing does not involve the use of poisonous chemicals or heavy metals like arsenic, copper, mercury, chlorine or bleach.

HOW ENVIRONMENTALLY CONSIDERATE IS MDF?

New Zealand MDF is made from renewable, sustainable local forests (predominantly pine). The best parts of the trees are used for structural timber, while the top third of trees, as well as remnants from local saw mill, are used to make MDF.

IS MDF SUITABLE FOR BURIAL?

Yes! In a study investigating the biodegradability of composite wood materials, it was concluded that the materials were aerobically biodegradable and there was no toxicity towards photobacteria (bacteria associated with plants) or substances of environmental concern in biodegradation.
